King's Watch in Pawn.

A time-honored London tavern, the Castle, at the corner of Cowcross street, facing Farringdon street, enjoys the unique distinction of being also a fully-licensed pledge shop.

Over a door in the bar, which gives access to the landlord's private room, and thrown into bold relief by the official document behind it, the historic three-sphered symbol is discernible. Anyone may here negotiate a loan upon his personal belongings without being under the necessity of first calling for refreshment.

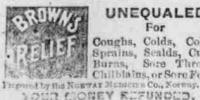

This strange combination of business dates from the reign of George IV., who, after attending a cock fight at Hockley-in-the-Hole, applied to the landlord of the castle for a temporary accommodation on the security of his watch and chain.

By royal warrant a few days later he invested that obliging boniface with the right of advancing money on pledges, and from that time down to the present a pawnbroker's license has been annually granted to the Castle. This hostelry is mentioned once or twice by Dickens.-Stray Stories.

If You Know One, Be Tactful and Let Him Converse About His Work.

I know nothing about really great authors, but I think I speak for a large number of the followers of the trade when I say that they like to talk about their work, one great reason being that writing is a lonely profession. If you write, as a rule you must do it by yourself; or if you do attempt it in company, you or the company will be sorry. Therefore, when the writing is done, and a sympathetic listener offers, the writer is glad to wipe out some of the lonely hours with a little conversation.

So, if you know an author, don't be too breathless about his calling; treat him like a human being. Let him talk a little, and do not be shocked if he manages to keep the tears back when he tells you about his last short story. Only, be tactful.

Do not say, as an eager acquaint ance once said to me: "Oh, I do think it is so interesting to write. It must be just fascinating when your manuscripts come back!" I discovered afterward that she meant proofs instead of manuscripts, but the mistake of just that single word made me, who am usually so garrulous about my trade, feel for the time being that I really did not care ever to speak of it again. So I repeat, let the poor author talk, but he tactful.-Atlantic Monthly.

Stevenson, While Fighting Off Discase There, Seemed Indifferent to the Laws of Health.

Robert Louis Stevenson, for so wise a man, seems to have been singularly unaware of, or Indifferent to, the laws of health, but that, too, may have been part of his wisdom. He spent the winter of 1887 in the Adirondacks struggling against the disease which was not to subdue him for seven years. He lived in a little cottage that was much overheated and from which all ventilation was carefully excluded The smoke of his incessant cigarettes obscured the atmosphere and perhaps helped to drive away the visitors who came to gaze upon him as one gazes at a lion in a den. Fashionable callers were specially unwelcome and Stevenson once remarked, according to an account in the Medical Record. that "It isn't the great unwashed which I dread, but the great washed. But whoever else was unwelcom there was always a greeting for Richard Mansfield. It is an impressive, atmost a tremendous picture, that of the clouded room fitfully lit by the flames of the log fire and Stevenson huddled close to the warmth while Mansfield at the other end of the rooom gave his weird impersonation of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. It must have been like God looking upon his handiwork and finding it good.

Man's Appeal to Himself

By Rev. J. H. Ralston, Secretary Correspondence Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT.-My soul, wait thou only upon God: for my expectation is from Him.-

These were the words of a man of affairs, one who had attained the highest position within reach, and that not by heredity chance, but by the force of his qualities; vet withal a man very human a man who knew the depths of sin as well as the heights of intimate communion with God - and this man called on his soul to wait upon God

The pealmist recognized within himself something to which many are very indifferent-a soul that related bim to God, and differentiated him from the brute creation. Whether that which he recognized was in itself immortal or only contained the pos sibility of immortality need not interest us now, but it was another self an alter ego, what some might call the subliminal self, and which has in those who have lived a life of pur poseful sin, been stifled, and yet cries out constantly for recognition, and nourishment, and ultimate perfection

It is not the imbecile who thinks of his soul, but it is the man who recognixes his true humanity, if you please; as in this case, oftentimes the man of of parts, of high ambitions And this man is frequently quite out t presence with those who profess to physicians of the soul and yet rescribe little or nothing that beneits the soul.

Great statesmen, financiers, railroad nagnates, inventors, artists, manueres, etc., when they go to h, want soul food, something to ch the soul responds. A leading wyer recently said with reference to message that should be given the pulpit; "It should come from and should relate to the inner it should be food for the soul."

The call was not to something in-Unite: "Wait thou only upon God." is the recognition of the corstive to the soul, the spiritual God. his recognition was not of an abtract idea, but of a personality-it ave no opportunity for quibbling and loubting. There was no suggestion in ny little "if." This man of affairs and great parts was not the only hisorical character who has thus thought and acted. Some men may be like lob and ask where they may find lod, but many others have had direct and constant intercourse with the piritual God, they have seen him who

s invisible. Can this not be said of our three nartyr presidents? Of Gladstone, of Bismarck, of William of Germany, of Justice Harlan? And as we glance back over the past do we not have hinese Gordon, Stonewall Jackson, Oliver Cromwell, Gustavus Adolphus, Savonarola, Paul, David, Moses, Abrabam and a host of others? Granting that these men waited on God, for so they all professed, their achievements are not an enigma.

What is it to wait on God? Is it not keeping silence before him? "Let all the earth keep silence before him.' And such silence before God is an essential element of prayer. One has recently said that prayer is not the claiming a hearing, it is giving a hearing; it is not speaking to God, it is listening to God. It is true that

'Whatever is best for me, my God will bring to me,
If I do only wait, and trust, and pray, What'er seems dark to me, shall end in light for me; 'Tis but the gloaming, which fore-runs

This waiting before God, too, suggests a readiness to respond to the call of God as the old retainers would respond to the call of their liege lords. And was there ever a period of the history of the race when the likelihood of a call was as great? The world is open to men spirit-filled to go to the thousand million human beings who as yet do not know the true the day."

Another suggestion is that of tarrying. How impatient we are! A man years of business. Ten more millions must be made in the next five years. Who now toils for the slow increase on an investment, except the man who lacks the speed of action of today's trading? And this is largely true of christian work-we will not work to the limit and be patient as long as the fruits do not fall into our laps in great quantities. And how impatient we are in trial! We will not wait until God gets through his process of realizing for us our best. until the purifying fire has burned away our dross. And this waiting on God would not be honoring to him unless our waiting was with confident expectation. The soul of David would never have received a blessing if he had waited before God indulging a perhaps.

DRUNKENNESS CAN BE CURED

Records Show That 30 to 36 Per Cent of Those Treated Have Been Cured of Drink Habit.

Although it has been several years since Benjamin Rush declared that habitual drunkards were diseased persons, there are even yet many men and women today, Dr. R. E. Bering declares, who do not agree with him, and consider it a waste of time to help them throw off this terrible burden under which they labor. It has been considered almost useless to undertake to cure anyone addicted to these habits, that all users were out of the pale of society and could never be restored to good manhood or womanhood, but from an experience of several hundred cases covering every phase of the situation, the doctor asserts, "I am sure that these habits are as positively and certainly curable as are any of the curable diseases. This is a hold and broad statement and one not yet accepted by the general medical profession in all of its detail, but it can be demonstrated to the satisfaction of anyone."

Dr. Day, for many years head of the Washingtonian home, Boston, an institution now in the fifty-second year of its experience, made a study of 8,000 cases that had formerly been under treatment, and found over 30 per cent sober and temperate. He says that "twenty-two years' experience in this work has taught me that the task is neither hopeless nor thankless, nor would it be if the meas ure of success had been lessened one half from the known rate of percentage of cures."

Dr. Mason, formerly of the King's County home, New York, examined the records of 2,000 cases that had been away from the asylum for 10 years and found 3" per cent of all cases cured.

Dr. T. D. Crothers of Hartford, Conn., editor of the "Journal of Inebriety," an author of much note, says: "The best authorities unite in considering 30 per cent of all patients remaining under treatment for one year or more as permanently cured."

ONE OF CARDINAL VIRTUES

Admirable Remarks Upon Subject of Temperance in Essay by President Hyde-It is Self Control.

An essay by President Hyde on "The Cardinal Virtues" contains some most admirable remarks upon the subject of temperance. Of course he uses the word in its widest sense as self-restraint in all things Temperance, says he, cuts off remorselessly whatever pleasures are inconsistent with the attainment of best results. The temperate man selects that which best fits his permanent ends.

The temptation to intemperance in drink comes chiefly from false ideas about pleasure. The man seeks enjoyment, but the injury is out of all proportion to the petty gains he secures. Today a man who permits himself to be seen drunk is not wanted for employe or partner or son-in-law or intimate friend. The man who keeps on using intoxicants when he knows they injure him confesses himself to be a slave and a fool. In view of the doubtful gain which even a moderate use of alcoholic liquor brings to those who interpret temporary exhibaration as permanent benefit, it is wisest to abstain. In view of the misery which liquor causes in the world, in view of the difficulty of using it without encouraging the abuse of it. and in view of what society would gain if its use were everywhere discouraged as a beverage--it is best to adopt a moderation which amounts to practical abstinence.

A man must practice stern self-denial and rigid self-control. But he must do more than that. He must cultivate beauty and sweetness in his

He is not simply to cut off whatever pleasure proves inconsistent with the attainment of the highest and best purposes in his own life, but he is to seek to be rightly related to his fellow men and to develop in himself those qualities which will add to the joy of living.

Alcohol Not Necessary.

"During twenty years' experience on the sea and on the snow in winter -an experience after an upbringing in soft places-I have found that al cohol has been entirely unnecessary for myself, and if ever I have the opportunity given to me to say a word at any time, or in any place, which will help to inhibit the use of alcohol as a beverage, so long as I stand on my feet I shall be proud to get up and speak it."-Dr. Grenfell of Labrador.

The Morning Drink.

Doctor Jones, an Australian inspector general of Retreats for Inebriates, says that he would compel publichouses to keep closed till midday. He believes it is the morning drink, taken of many successful farmers in this and when little food has been eaten that does the most harm, and he holds that temperance reformers woud do better to agitate for late opening than for early closing of licensed premises.

Drink Causes Crime.

"Not only is drink responsible for more crime than any other single cause, but it is responsible for more than all other causes put together."-Mr. Justice Hodges, Victoria.

Home-Mixed Fertilizers are Cheapest and Best

Practically all farmers who have given home-mixing a thorough trial are convinced that this is by far the most economical and satisfactory method of purchasing fertilizers. If you will send us your name on a postal card with request therefor, we will send you free, postpaid, leaflets which give the opinions neighboring states regarding homemixing. We will also send a number of formulas which were made up for us by the Director of the Vermont Experiment Station and which have been used by many farmers in Vermont with excellent success. We will also give full directions for mixing fertilizer adapted to all the crops commonly raised on Vermont farms.
